MILLIONS UNREACHED. NONE UNREACHABLE.
Ethnos360 Aviation serves pioneer church planting teams in the remotest regions of Brazil, Indonesia, Papua New Guinea, and the Philippines. These teams spend 10 to 20 years immersing themselves in the language and culture of the people. The goal? To establish thriving groups of trained believers, Scripture in hand, who can in turn reach neighboring villages and beyond with the gospel.

As the missionaries — often national and indigenous people themselves — work year after year, Ethnos360 Aviation sustains them. The plane brings food and supplies. It transports translation and church planting consultants and takes children back and forth to school. Aircraft act as the ambulance for medical emergencies. Flights carry goods and commodities for the village people. In times of drought, flood, and other natural disasters, the plane brings relief.
ETHNOS360 AVIATION MAKES FLIGHTS AFFORDABLE!

We want church planting teams to have the flight service they need to pioneer deeper into isolated and rugged areas. Whether the missionaries are expatriate or national – or even indigenous, reaching out just like the missionaries who reached them years before – we trust God to make the flights happen for the price they can afford to pay.

Trips that could take them four to five days by land — carrying their children on their backs — might take only 30 minutes by air. Church planters can spend time teaching and translating God’s Word rather than hiking and arriving exhausted without necessary supplies to live on. Such an extremely rugged ministry must be sustainable long term — and Ethnos360 Aviation makes it possible. Millions may be unreached, but none are unreachable!
MANY AIRCRAFT. MANY WORKERS.
Ethnos360 Aviation operates multiple Kodiak airplanes and R66 helicopters to tailor its services to the needs of church planting teams in remote areas.
